Atlantic City

A CEASELESS throng does homage to a ceaseless sea. All the year through are travellers from far and near seeking the perennial virtues of Atlantic City. Even in mid-winter—in a latitude decidedly northern—the God-given Gulf Stream tempers the wind and wave to the healthful benefit of invalid thousands. But summer—mid-summer is the season of all seasons at Atlantic City. Then all nature, including human nature, laughs at disease, and dull care is known no more.

There is no doubt that the beach at this resort stands pre-eminent in all the world for bathers; evidenced by the vast multitude that every pleasant day in summer surges along the Strand—in and out among the bounding billows.

Then the "Boardwalk," the idea of which originated at Atlantic City, was indeed a happy thought—it is the right thing in the right place—a splendid promenade extending over four miles, where within the sound and sight of the sea, countless thousands pass in review—reviewers and reviewed alike. This dress parade is one of the features of Atlantic City, the stores, bazaars, theatres and "midway" pleasures lending not a little to the general interest. The Piers extending one or two thousand feet into the ocean, offer additional opportunities for enjoyment.

Atlantic City is a safe and delightful summer resort for children. Nothing like digging into the mysterious sand, hunting for odd bits of shell or pretty rounded pebbles, and paddling around in the shoal water to put the bloom of health on youth's young cheek.

Atlantic City was incorporated as a city in 1854 with a population of 250 souls and now has a permanent population of 35,000, which swells in summer to nearly ten times that number. The property valuation is over $100,000,000, land on the ocean front being worth $2,000 a front foot. The first hotel was built here in 1812, and now over 600 open wide hospitable doors to guests.

In many seaside resorts, sanitary conditions are an afterthought, if thought of at all, but here they have been made a primary consideration, the result being a perfect system of drainage which keeps the bathing waters pure and free from refuse; while artesian wells, some of them 1,000 feet deep, together with natural springs on the mainland, provide pure drinking water.

Fast trains from New York ( 3 hours distant ) and Philadelphia ( 1 hour away ) offer luxurious and rapid transportation from the great cities.
